Clinton Anderson on leather care.

Clinton Anderson, leading trainer, clinician and the first person to win the prestigious Road to the Horse colt starting competition twice in a row.

Clinton Anderson of Downunder Horsemanship® sets—and meets—the highest performance standards for himself, his horses and his equipment. The meticulously maintained tack at his state-of-the-art Downunder Horsemanship training facility in Belle Center, Ohio, proves Clinton knows how to treat leather as well as horses. An important component in his leather care program is Lexol. As Clinton puts it:

"I love soft leather, and that's why I use only Lexol to condition my tack. It works fast, and it lasts a long time. I want my leather to be as strong, safe and supple as possible for my own security and the horse's comfort."

"You get out of leather what you put into it. Lexol is simple, it's easy, and it works. What more could you want?"

Leather Myths

- 1. You shouldn't get leather wet. Not so. Leather is made in water. Hardened leather is the result of improper drying (Never use heat.) or a lack of essential lubrication in the fibers.
- 2. One-step products can both clean and condition leather. Only poorly. Cleaning requires that oils be removed; conditioning requires that oils be added. No single treatment can remove the oils to get the dirt out and replace the oils to lubricate the leather.
- 3. Saddle soap is a good leather cleaner. Untrue. Paste saddle soaps are a mixture of oil and soap (see "One-step products" above). Further, all soaps are alkaline - and alkalinity damages the leather used in saddles and bridles. The soap causes it to turn dark, and it also removes the tanning agents - leading to hardening and cracking as the leather is detanned.
- 4. A blond or light colored saddle will darken with age. Not necessarily. The darkening is due to the application of heavy, raw oils and to the alkalinity of saddle soaps. The use of Lexol-pH Cleaner and modern leather conditioners (such as Lexol or Lexol-NF) can keep a saddle light for years.

Wormers

Delivery For All Wormers

At first glance, the array of wormers to choose from appears mind-boggling. However, by looking at the active ingredient it can be seen that many of the brands contain the same drug and perform the same function. Below is a summary of the active ingredients available in the most commonly used wormers.

Drug Groups

- 1) Benzimidazole - Panacur & Telmin - These wormers deal with some worms like small and large redworms, large roundworms, seatworms (pinworms), lungworms. It does not treat tapeworm or Bots. Larger doses may be needed for lungworms and encysted (forming a protective membrane around themselves) migrating small redworms.
- 2) Pyrantel - Strongid & Embotape -

These are very effective against large and small redworms, large roundworms and seatworms (pinworms) but not bots, lungworms or encysted redworms. A double dose is effective against some tapeworms.

- 3) Ivermectin - Bimectin, Eqvalan, Eraquell, Equimax & Noromectin - Historically, a good general purpose wormer which treats against large and small redworms, large roundworms and seatworms (pinworms), lungworm and bots, except tapeworms and encysted small redworms.
- 4) Moxidectin - Equest & Equest Pramox - The best & longest lasting drug available which treats against large and small redworms, large roundworms and seatworms (pinworms), lungworm and bots, except tapeworm. Moxidectin stays up to thirteen weeks in the body killing worm eggs and larvae for that period. Controls ALL stages of encysted small redworms.

5) Praziquantel - Equitape, Eqvalan Duo, Equest Pramox & Equimax - Is a specific tapeworm treatment and is effective against all three species of tapeworms found in Ireland with a standard dose.

Worming Advice

1. Treatment for encysted redworms should be done at least once per year.
2. Treatment for tapeworms should be included in the autumn and spring.
3. Bot treatments should be timed for the autumn/winter
4. Do not underdose as this can encourage resistance. Use a weight tape.
5. Rotate Wormers to prevent the possibility of drug resistance forming for a particular drug group.
